

Workers' Compensation Study Shows Prescription Drug Spending Up

www.sedgwick.com | 800.625.6588

A recent NCCI study reports prescription drug spending now represents a disproportionately high percentage of workers' compensation costs – and that number is increasing.

Inflated drug pricing, increased use of narcotics and inappropriate prescriptions are the primary cost drivers.

Sedgwick understands the magnitude of this issue and the challenges it presents. Through our strategically designed process, we are reaching to the heart of the problem and producing results for our clients. With an experienced team of medical professionals and claims examiners, coupled with state-of-the-art technology, we are keeping providers in check and your pharmacy costs under control.

Click here to learn more about the recent NCCI study and our solution for clients.

Coming soon: watch for news from Sedgwick on the issues and solutions around physician dispensing and narcotics management.

For questions, please contact your Sedgwick client services manager.